

Project P
Source 079
23 July 1987

I got the impression of a woman or a group of women dealing with something new. A new way in health or in nutrition.

I got the impression of a vibrant color. It could be orange.

I got the impression of reading something about space control and at the same time receiving something about environmental control. Somehow connected.

I got the impression that these women were demonstrating something. It was fun but meant something.

There was a black stripe over the cover of the magazine and I could not determine if it was one person or several people on the cover but it was of a woman.